

Fellowship 7/27

- Val calls meeting to order at 10:49 PM
- Welcome new arrivals
 - they share name, school, grade, something looking forward to
- Share fun/interesting things!
 - Fitz was deified by Wisconsin kids
 - Cassandra and co. played frisbee with college kids
 - Kael and friends found a lizard??
 - The Apple Watch debacle
 - Kim discovered her room's thermostat after spending the night freezing
 - Tori took a shower before fellowship and there was hot water (much rejoicing ensues)
 - Ian learned that the delegates from West Virginia are weak for they cannot lift a 20 pound box of t-shirts
 - Katie discovered that swimming was closed today, but tomorrow it will be open from 4 to 8
 - Spencer would like to add that his shower is working fine
 - Wieser + Lina W. were "the cutest couple" @ costume contest
 - Sam Shipley: "Go Illinois frisbee!"
 - Kael, again: she and Cassandra had a really good swim meet
 - Ajmal tells everyone to add the Convention Ear on Snapchat
- Emily begins to lead the delegation in the human knot, despite dissent or tries to until Ms. Jordt interjects because that was supposed to be for Thursday!
 - We decide upon ninja instead!
 - Room is divided in half; one group plays while the other spectates
 - First group: I couldn't really follow everything that was going on but it involved a lot of yelling, Samir doing a flying leap, and Sam Kurzydlo periodically shouting "Avenge Paul!" The final face-off is between Samir and Emily Driscoll and Samir quickly lost his nametag in the fracas. After some initial tussling, Samir defeats Emily with a swift jab.
 - Second group: Inexplicably, this group is significantly larger and less organized than the first. Despite his promises to avenge Paul's defeat, Sam is soon knocked out of the game. Also, this round involves a lot more leaping and rolling on the floor. No one is ever really sure whose turn it is, but there's definitely a lot of violence involved. Because the game has gone on for too long, an executive decision is made to switch to instant elimination (i.e., only one of their hands must be hit in order for a player to be eliminated). The crowd takes up chanting "Let's go, Jimmy!" until Charlie yells at Wieser to stop. The round comes down to Katie and Jimmy, and involves a tense staredown conducted largely in a lunge position by both players, until suddenly, Katie emerges victorious!
 - Lina W. and Emily explain roll call. They open the floor for discussion/suggestions:
 - Lyle suggests a Hairspray (the musical) kind of roll call thing
 - Sam says people asked him to do his voices
 - Obviously, this calls for a demonstration
 - Obama voice? Obama is from Illinois?
 - Ian has made a Stanley cup
 - Ajmal mentions the We Kane/We Shaw/We Crawford thing
 - Kim reminds everyone of Ian's Stanley cup
 - Patrick suggests Stanley cup joke ("Hey is that the Stanley cup?" "Yeah, Illinois's got so many they're just giving them out now!")
 - This is the crowd favorite, apparently
 - Kael has a Blackhawks Jersey

- Ajmal suggests Oprah/one for you riff
 - Paul suggests a Sharpe/sharp pun
 - Lina confirms that everyone is in agreement about the general idea of our roll call
- Lina W moves us along to spirit, with much rejoicing
 - review cheers as a group
- Charlie dazzles us with election information
 - 13 candidates
 - NomCom at 4 tomorrow
- Cassandra is invited to share ludi information
 - Tomorrow is ludi basketball (4-6)
 - Sign-in @ 3:45 at webster gym in the Bell center
 - Track people will meet up tomorrow morning for breakfast
 - Emily goes over the stuff that's in the ludi paperwork
- Val reviews some highlights of tomorrow's schedule
 - Everyone meet at 1:30 for spirit
 - Ali says: 81010 -> text for certamen info
 - @certnov
 - @certint
 - @certadv
 - Mr. Nifong says that for reasons hitherto unexplained, there are rooms in our fellowship building that are booby-trapped and lock and people get stuck
 - Announcement about Centipedes on Fire practice; see Layne and Kael
- Adjourn at 11:44
